The First Year

As I clear out the cobwebs of my "brain" I recall, from the dark recesses of my "mind," one year in my life that will be as "fresh" in fifty years as it is today. My freshman year was a year of growing, not physically mind you. All the new hassles were counter-balanced by the great times I experienced. I would like to share with you that terrible, terrific excursion into reality.

Being the "typical" freshman that I fear I was I remember everything feeling new and exciting. I can even laugh when I remember the numerous times I wondered which building I was in, if I was at the right campus and if it was the right time. Even the cafeteria food tasted like food (THAT'S INCREDIBLE!).

The first few weeks come back to me all jumbled and confused (my state of mind if I recall). The mass of beauracrat paper work involved with section changes and Drop-Adds (How many forms do I need to Drop and Add?) took me for a spin but once things were straightened out on the surface I clamly fastened my seat belt and prepared myself for the ride I was about to take—and what a ride it was!

The academic work load wasn't as back-breaking as it could have been but I did catch on to the fact that you might have to open a book every now and then. Imagine planning time to read "X" amount of material each night (or maybe X minus "Y" tonight and "Z" sometime later). All in all the bottom line was: it should be done when it was expected to be done and there weren't many excuses (the "my grandmother died" excuse failed to work the third time around).

One of the most dynamic experiences I recollect is "pledging" to the sorority. It was something I might not be exactly thrilled to do again, but I'm really glad I did it the first time. My sisters are the greatest and with their help I took the chance to say "hey I think I'm going to like it here!"

I had been hearing about The Old Worthen for weeks and was curious as to what I would find there. So, when they thought I was ready I was escorted to the Worthen. I still wonder if anyone can really be "ready" for that Worthen, but it was my first night of many "close encounters."

Thursday nights were the best. I still feel queasy when I think about that first draft beer—it definately had a taste all its own. I shudder when I guess how many beers I must have downed during my extended stays at that Worthen.

Closing was the worst. For some strange reason I never wanted to leave (sound familiar?). Finding a ride home posed a problem. Not knowing in which direction the dorm was arrested any attempt to walk—Carol, could I be a left shoe?

Once back home the main problem was getting to the right floor—I think some- one up there likes me because the walls seem to look vaguely familiar. Taking out the lenses was one thing but after a night of partying finding the one that missed the case was a feat in itself.

Registration is something I wish I could forget. Waiting in a line that went from the gym to the Security building wasn't one of the prime times of my life, but I'm sure everyone else felt the same—MISERY LOVES COMPANY.

The claustrophobic reactions set in about three feet from the door, but I rationalized that the sooner I got in the sooner I would get out. I think my schedule changed three times that day, but I survived registration '79—am I a veteran yet?

My first exposure to finals was definitely a bummer. The library was actually open after dark and I spent many a night sitting in a cage. Hey Joan—meet me at twelve and we'll take a "smoke" break! I didn't get much studying done that particular night, but finding Santoro's when we were only slightly buzzed was a trip.

I spent New Year's Eve in the hills of New Hampshire. The ride up was wild—Hey could you stop at the next cemetery? The amazing part was finding the chalet the first time (Not being able to see the street signs didn't help much!). I had a feeling that this year would be bizarre but hey, it's 1980—ANYTHING CAN HAPPEN!

Spring semester flew right by me. It seems that we had just gotten back from semester break and we were going home for spring break.

IFSC weekend was crazy. The Caravan was great. The Dragon Wagon survived the beating (but what about the driver?). I enjoyed myself immensely at Theme Night, maybe too immensely because I wasn't at Choral Comp.

My birthday fell on a Thursday and I was down at Worthen. "Would you like a beer?—No—Yes!" That first half hour, or was it an hour, was the worst. Every time I looked at my beer there was a penny in it. I had a Chem test the next day and fortunately my paranoia had gotten the best of me. Imagine—I walked out.

When spring Carnival arrived I was psyched. I was finally going to experience it (and experience it I did!). I spent most of the day residing in the OZONE. I wasn't able to deal with the kissing booth so I made myself scarce—munching on brownies and enjoying myself to the max.

When I look back on it all, there were so many other times like the Maddog party where they didn't want us to leave so much that they disconnected the spark-plugs of our car, or what didn't happen February 29, 1980!

I feel that I aged ten years to the one year of actual duration time. I'm a Sophomore now, or as Socrates would say "a wise fool", and I ponder the years ahead I wonder "am I opening Pandora's Box?!"

Memories Stir In My Head

About the only redeeming quality of an 8:00 class is that you have no trouble finding a parking space. You might even find one that's fairly free of broken glass. Professors probably like 8:00 classes less than students. Who'd want to lecture to a class of yawning students, many of whom walk in late, and most of whom pay more attention to their coffee than the lecture?

I'm lucky this morning. The lecture is being supplemented by slides, so I don't have to force myself to look awake and interested. Like the rest of the class, I slump back in my chair and sip my coffee. The first slide slips in and out of focus, as do my thoughts. With graduation only a semester away, I find I'm often caught in reflections on the past few years.

It's been almost four years since I received the "Dear Applicant" form letter notifying me of my acceptance to ULowell. There's been so much fun, so much aggravation, so many late night papers and studying marathons since then. I can still remember my first class, taught by the most humorous critic in the English Department. After his first class, I knew I was going to like it at ULowell.

My high school classmates and I compared the atmosphere at ULowell to our high school. The freedom, the maturity and the responsible attitudes of the students impressed us. Coming from a high school that had treated jocks as demi-gods, we were pleased to find that ULowell's jocks were regular students with an athletic talent. It was a friendly Campus, and we liked it.

My mind drifts back to the lecture. The professor recommends a book that can elucidate the slides we are viewing. I write the title into my notebook, as I always do when a book is recommended. After three and a half years, I've got a long list of recommended readings, but I've yet to read more than two or three of them. More slides are projected on to the screen, more memories stir in my head.

I think what my friends and I will miss alot when we graduate is our club office in the SUB. It's been a second home to us for a few years, and we've had many marathon study sessions there. It's an active club, and it's given me a sense of being part of Campus life. Through the club, I've become more involved in University affairs and I've gotten to know many professors outside the classroom. There is much more substance to my college life than if I just attended class and went home. Of course, the club's been a source of frustration once in awhile, when there doesn't seem to be enough time to work on the activities, but the rewards outnumber the frustrations. We've had so much fun designing booths for Spring Carnival, and setting up the booths on dismal, rainy nights. We feel proud to be able to work with the English Department to give student input to the Department changes. We've worked hard to structure this club into a popular and respected organization, and we've succeeded, only to realize that most of the members will graduate this year.

In the office is an article someone brought in that discusses depression in college students. There are so many pressures in college life that the depression is easy to understand. Too much homework for a social life, or too much social life to meet paper deadlines. Two exams and a paper due on the same day. Having to work the day before a major exam. A sinking cum. Trying to get by on four or five hours sleep and gallons of coffee. But somehow you survive, and make it into your fourth and last year. Or is it your last? You fill out the Program of Studies and discover you're missing a requirement, one you didn't know about because it's written in fine print under a heading for a requirement that doesn't concern you. You wonder if you'll ever see graduation day. How many more times will you have to suffer the lines at registration? It's panicky, tense moments like these that you realize who your best friends are — the ones who calm you down and sort out your problems and help you solve them.

I'm brought back to the present when the professor asks me some questions related to the slides. He knows I'm an English Major, so he assumes I'll know the answer. Fortunately I do. Satisfied, he puts on another slide, and I slip back to my thoughts.

To be an English Major means suffering these exclamations: "English! What are you going to do with an English degree?! Teach?" Majoring in English may not be practical, in view of today's job market, but it's certainly interesting. Besides, I may have Dr. Faustus' quest for knowledge, but I don't have his ambition. I like courses that encourage thought and creativity, even if it won't help me get a high-paying job. I've been told that I'm wasting my education taking so many philosophy and literature courses. I'd feel I was wasting my mind if I concentrated only on Business courses. This ideology has been difficult for many practical minded people to accept, but I'll continue to defend it.

I know I'm going to miss ULowell when I graduate. I'll miss the practical jokes played on our club by the "Tsar" of the English Department, I'll miss all the free activities sponsored by the University—the movies, Trent's mime, the parties, Spring Carnival, and the concerts. I'll miss Coburn Hall with its heavy doors and its too cold or too hot rooms. I think I'll miss cramming the night before an exam. It's been four enjoyable—and educational—years, and sometimes I wish I did have to come back for another semester. There's so much more I want to learn, so many courses I'd like to have had the time to take. I don't want to leave!

The lights go back on, the slide presentation is finished. I walk over to the office, still quietly reflecting. I drop off my books and then leave for North Campus to drop off my Program of Studies so I can graduate in May.

I'm Still Laughing

In my first three years of wandering aimlessly through the hallowed halls of the University of Lowell, I have learned many strange and wonderful things. Among these bits of knowledge, now stored away in the corners of my brain, lurks the fact that life in general, and school life in particular, is not half as bad as everyone makes it out to be.

I'm not saying that complaining about the things which are a general pain is not legitimate. Complaining is an integral part of every students life, and a great source of conversation. All I'm trying to point out is that if I, a confessed dumb broad, can survive the rigors of techie life, it just can't be all that bad.

I am completely convinced that attitude is the most important factor in maintaining your sanity in this not so sane environment. Fortunately for me, I started out from day one with an "I can see the humor in anything" attitude. This I found to be my best defense against the contradictions, misunderstandings, and general screwups which seem to occur daily in the life of every ULowell student.

Red tape is definitely my favorite amusing pastime here at the University. Before I had even managed to complete my first month of intensive (?) studies, I came to the realization that in order to even sneeze in class, you must fill out 30 forms in triplicate.

Instead of letting this annoying process drive me to taking a midnight swim in the Northern Canal, I decided that if you can't beat them, smother them! So now before making even a minor change in my life pattern, I make sure to hit up the registrars office for a large pile of every form I can find. I then ask everyone I can find to sign somewhere on something, hoping that eventually I will get the right signature on the right form.

This manner of thinking can easily be applied to even the most ridiculous situations. The main objective of this type of behavior is, obviously, to keep everyone who is involved more confused than you are, in order to finagle what you want out of them. It sometimes amazes me how easily most people can be confused!

Classes are another fascinating aspect of college life. Professors here at ULowell would actually have you believe that you should learn and remember everything they teach. This, of course, is perfect nonsense. Everyone knows that the human brain is only capable of retaining a certain amount of bull before the Roto-Rooter man must be called in to clean out the mess.

Sorting through the jumble of information in order to pick out those facts which are of actual importance, and/or will actually be included on the test, can be extremely difficult. Whenever I find my mind overloaded with gobbledygook and just about to short circuit, I try to consult a fellow student.

Why, you say, are two confused minds better than one? Well, misery loves company, and often just knowing that you are not alone is enough to keep you stable. Besides, if you still can't deal with the mess, at least you have someone to drink with. All in all, if you can get through your classes, beaurocratic hassles, and other difficulties with a lot of snickering and only a few headaches, you can consider yourself very lucky. I've managed to pull through it all so far, and still maintain some semblance of sanity. Not only that, but I'm still laughing.

Turning Corners

Maybe it's only luck. I don't know. It seems as if sometimes there is simply no choice but to go, knowing that you have no idea where you're going. There is always one who makes straight lines; some are able to dive into adversity as if it were the Merrimack River and emerge on the other side undaunted and perfumed. There is, for such a one, no trial. Necessity and reality hold hands. One of the hardest trials for me during my college existence has been to find a decent place to live.

My first apartment was a breakthrough, or rather a break-in. It was in a condemned building being juiced up for another ten years. I didn't mind. Being an adventurer, it was like hiking for me. I slept on the kitchen floor in authentic freedom. The rent was reasonable, since there was none and the landlord stopped in only occasionally to deliver lumber and other such clutter.

Never having lived in Lowell, finding the employment office was a real task. I found it, however and it worked. I received my instructions and my second morning in Lowell began with a bicycle ride across town to find my new employer. The wind was cold and the sky poured buckets. After an hour or so of being lost, pedalling around in circles, I lit upon it; a now defunct chemical waste outfit where for a month I was to sense the darker side of Lowell. Luckily, strange as it seems, and quickly, like a change in the weather, I was laid off and the landlord materialized looking for money. I was in the street with a new beginning. In two weeks my first semester at ULowell would begin, and I was on my back.

On the rebound, my second apartment turned out to be cherry, (red, so to speak). Sunday morning papers and coffee felt good in my hobbit-size hole. I felt mature and at home. Then came the change. When the fire broke out, I was having coffee and writing. I dropped my notebook along with a certain heartfelt trust in neighborly intentions. The entire building of five floors was loaded with street urchins; snivelling ten year olds with clubs and rocks, and chips on their shoulders. Unfortunately, my kitchen/living room window was at urchin eye level and had a small rock hole in it. On the morning of the fire, a kitchen match came through the hole and landed on the couch beneath. There were small puffs of smoke but I was there to put the fire out with my coffee. I ran to the door and noticed several kids whom I yelled at to no avail. I saw a few in the pack spar with each other and I mused on the thought of batting one or two of them about.

To avoid any future conflagrations, I moved to an apartment three blocks away in Cupples Square. Here I had roommates whom I slightly knew but none of them were students. Set up like a rooming house, there was a community kitchen and bathroom shared by seven tenants. I spent my freshman year there, studying little, mostly partying. Again, I began to feel at home until, at night, when I could hear footsteps, faint wee footsteps in my room, barely audible against the hissing of the radiator. For a few days I loaded and emptied mousetraps until the problem was solved. The mice came in by the hoards. They seemed to enjoy the vibration and rattle of the radiator rocking them to sleep through the long, cold drear of winter nights, but I did not. Nor did I like them. There just wasn't any room . . .

Tim Geist

Bill Danavon

I marched through the snow to school and back as if I were performing some odd ritual which I did not understand. My fellow roomies were collecting unemployment and foodstamps, wondering at my self-torture. Their apathetic logic was wearing off on me. Looking at them I saw the ease of flowing within the State and found myself at odds with this workless wonder. I felt I was loosing ground, wasting time. I wanted to move, to avoid the temptation to throw it all away. I decided to remain, to more or less find a middle ground where I could work at school, study at home and maintain a social life. Still I leaned toward the social aspect and took my education lying down. I almost gave up, but through some seemingly delicate precision it came to pass that my landlord had decided to rip down the rat nest, dust the domicile, purge me of my purgatory. He wanted to rest cars on the same spot, it being very favorable ground next door to his gas station, so of course, I cleared out.

Recrossing the river, I found a place with a buddy of mine that had a washer and dryer downstairs, and I could not believe it, a garage. Ah, Pawtucketville. I spent two years there feeling well on my way up the renter's ladder, looking into the light of tenant heaven. But my new landlord hovered like a storm cloud in the second floor apartment. He lived up there with his father, who was nothing but an aging pest. At five in the morning, all winter long, the old man would trek through our front door and go down into the cellar to chop wood and smoke, underneath my bedroom. But I resigned myself to it, learning to fall asleep between chops. Beside that, for two years I managed to stop him from throwing away most of my auto parts which I'd often leave here and there to clean. He was, however, persistent, and managed to sneak some choice articles into the trash. Snow tires, a drill, a transmission mount, I was happy to move when the time was right.

Now that I've found the most agreeable place so far . . . I only hope that my ladder holds out. The places where I used to live are all around the corner. I can turn around to see where I've been but for now I'd rather not. I am well fed and have learned to balance social life and school life as far as possible. Looking into the smokey, grey past it seems as if I have been like a water bug, turning in dreamy revolutions around Lowell, across the river and back, spinning through town. The choices are lost, but now I know, in a little while I'll be turning wider circles, edging my way out of town.

Habitat Hassles

Imagine, if you can, what it would be like to live with thirty-five Danvers State rejects, all on one floor, all sharing four showers, and one telephone. Now, imagine this situation existing for nine months a year for four years. Are you shaking yet? This arrangement is referred to as "dorm life." In this lovely living environment you must perform all your activities of daily living— if you dare. For starters, if your classes begin between 8:00 and 10:00 'better start heading for the shower at four A.M., because after that time the hot water is shut off and the lines for the showers back up to the elevators. If you do make it through the showering throng, and if you somehow have managed to salvage thirty minutes before class, school officials allow you to attend what they call "breakfast." Yes folks, for half a grand a year you, too, can eat fried silly putty and buttered floor tiles. After that's thrown, and of course, after you've slept through twelve hours of lectures you have the emense joy of returning to your 4"X4" box to enjoy a peaceful night of study. Peaceful? Oh, yes, it's peaceful if you get into Bach's B-Minor Mass played full blast as background music for the cacaphony of the other box creatures watching Gilligan's Island reruns on the lobby tube outside your door. Oh, and of course you cannot forget the nymphomaniac upstairs whose bed-springs have not stopped rattling since September. But, I'll be honest, there are those moments when you and a few good friends

Reorganization

Among many political changes which happen each year, there are a few which will affect our lives as college students. One example of this is the increase in the drinking age. Another more recent change is the structure of higher education. The present structure was established in 1965, which consisted of each school having their own "Power Board," Board of Trustees.

They were the decision makers for the institution. The Board consisted of 15 members; 14 of which were appointed by the governor, and 1, a student who was elected by the student body. He/she represents and voices the opinions of the students. The new system changes this drastically. All of the present Boards, as of March 1, 1981 will be dismissed and replaced by a "Super Board." This Board will carry the name of "Board of Regents." It will be made up of 15 governor-appointed members with no student representation.

Under the reorganization plan, each institution will have one less powerful board composed of 9 members. Again with no student representation. This is a major problem because no student opinions will be voiced in the policy making bodies. All decisions will be made by an appointed board member, who usually is a lawyer, a businessman, or someone who Governor King owed a favor.

The reorganization plan gives a tremendous amount of power to the "Super Board," but it does not specifically describe how this authority is to be used in all instances. There is still room for those with strong conviction to influence the shape of things to come.

Orientation 1980

Confused freshmen, transfers, and readmitted students invaded ULowell for orientation beginning on June 2nd. The Towers was their place of habitation for the overnight stay. Entertainment was provided by Ed Priest and displays of clubs and organizations were held on the second floor of the building. Of course, registration was a hassle, and the forbidden parties occurred, but the biggest dilemma was how to eat the cafeteria food without becoming ill.

Enrollment increased immensely this year, as you may have noticed. A lot of new faces filled the campus. The enrollment for 1980-81 is 7,772, the largest population the university has experienced.

1980 Summer Olympic Boycott

On December 27, 1979, Soviet military forces invaded Afghanistan, killing thousands of innocent residents. In retaliation, President Carter instituted a cutoff of agricultural products and high technology equipment, a limit on other commerce with the Soviets and a halt to permits for Soviet ships to fish in the U.S. coastal waters.

On January 20, 1980, President Carter wrote to the President of the U.S. International Olympic Committee, urging the committee to propose to the International Olympic Committee that the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow be transferred, postponed, or cancelled if the Soviet Forces were not withdrawn from Afghanistan within a month. The U.S. felt that holding the games in Moscow would sanction the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and represent a travesty of Olympic principals.

On April 12, 1980, by vote of 1604 to 797, the U.S. team decided to boycott the 1980 Summer Games in Moscow. Vice-President Mondale, speaking for President Carter, was quoted as saying, "I am convinced that the American people do not want their athletes cast as pawns in that tawdry propaganda charade."

Instead of sending a team to Moscow, the President said that the U.S. would be working closely with the like-minded countries to organize world-class competitions for an International Sports Festival following the games in Moscow, for athletes from all countries and especially those countries who did not send a team to Moscow.

The Shah Of Iran Dead

On July 27th, it was reported that the Shah of Iran had died. This news was accepted with both grief and relief. Grief was expressed because of the death of a fellow human being, and relief was felt because the hostages were on the road to freedom. Many Americans assumed that since the Shah was dead, Khomeini had no further reason to hold the hostages. This was quickly proven false. After four months, the hostages were still in the embassy in Tehran with no sign of their release in sight.

Some people doubted that the Shah really died. However, reports were believed to be valid and the Shah was supposedly buried.

He died while in exile. His crimes in Iran of exploiting his powers and stealing from the Iranian government to increase his bank accounts to huge figures caused the necessity of his quick departure from Iran. He was wanted dead by all Iranians that followed the Ayatollah religiously. The Shah fled to New York where he received treatment for cancer present in his body. This cancer was thought to be "made up" by the Muslims back in Iran. Finally the Shah went to Panama, where he remained until his death.

The Pink Panther Gone

On July 23rd, Peter Sellers died at the age of 54 at London's Middlesex Hospital after suffering his third heart attack. He collapsed at the Dorchester Hotel and never regained consciousness.

Mr. Sellers had a history of heart trouble for 16 years prior to his death. He had his first heart attack in 1964 while with one of his close friends Milton Berle. All of Mr. Sellers' colleagues mourn his death and realize what a great loss the show business trade has suffered.

Mr. Sellers' performances as Inspector Clouseau in the Pink Panther flicks will long be remembered. These movies are an entertainment menagerie. He could make you laugh with his many disguises or just by falling over someone's foot. He had a gift that only a few people were lucky enough to possess.

Peter Sellers was a man that no one could replace. His philosophy towards life was lived by him and his wife up until the end. "Live before you die, or die before you live ..."

Thank you, Peter Sellers, for all of yourself that you gave to your audience. You are greatly appreciated now, and will be missed in the years to come. It will take a long time for the Pink Panther to die in the hearts of the millions of people around the world that were fortunate enough to have seen him.

Hostage Sent Homeward

The date was July 11, 1980. At this time, the American hostages in Iran had been in captivity for eight months. Richard I. Queen, thought by the Muslims to be dying, was released due to this assumption. It turned out that he had multiple sclerosis and was not dying at all.

Richard was able to shed some light on the situation in Iran, however, it was not enough to enable the U.S. government to get the hostages released.

Much criticism was directed toward the president, after having his first attempt of freeing the hostages fail. Eight American men lost their lives in the skirmish.

Draft Beer, Not People . . . Stop The Draft

On July 21st, the first of four million 19 and 20 year old men began to pre-register for the draft in post offices across the nation.

This was the first time since the glorious reign of Nixon in '72, when the draft was ended, that this issue brought national attention.

According to a spokesman for the Carter Administration, the pre-registration is designed solely to meet manpower needs in the case of war.

This may be the original intention, but many others feel that this may turn out to be the first step toward the reinstatement of a peacetime draft—with no other reason than to fill the storage of qualified military personnel.

Even with the promission of the return of a peacetime draft, many feel that this preliminary step of registration is essential.

According to a recent survey of males 19-20 years of age at the University of Lowell, 87% felt that the pre-registration was a necessary action. Of the 87% who thought it was necessary, 100% said they had already registered or would register when the time came.

In comparison to a national poll, taken by gallop, the University of Lowell student was much more willing to register (87% vs. 71%). Possibly, because of the self-consciousness to fight for one's country, but who knows it could have also been the $10,000 fine and/or five years imprisonment.

Did you register?

1st Senior Booze Cruise 10-4-80

In the still of the evening on October 4, 1980, about five hundred teetotaling seniors boarded their designated yellow vehicles of transportation—ocean bound. Well, we were dumped on some wharf in Boston, to the cries of seagulls, boats rubbing against their moorings and anxious queries of "where the hell is the bathroom?" As the now inebriated teetotalers stumbled over the plank, the lines for the bar were already six hours long. The motors gunned, the smokers hummed and the seasick bummed. our Love Boat Booze Cruise took its toll on Boston Harbor. The hardier in stature stood their beers and bodies on the upper deck in order to feel the subzero ocean breeze and to spit on the people on the deck below. The less ocean worthy spent their time undercover, listening to the music drown out the sounds of some chick trying to scoop. On the bottom deck, referred to as the poop deck, was the most frequented because there one could find Boston's famous

Election Day, 11-4-80

On November 4, 1980 Ronald Wilson Reagan was elected the 40th President of the United States of America. The former governor of California and Hollywood actor was elected in a Republic sweep that gave the Republicans control of the Executive branch and Senate. The Republican tide sent such prominent Democratic liberals as Sen. Birch Bayh, Sen. George McGovern, and Congressman John Brademas down to defeat. The Republicans ended a quarter-century of Democratic rule in the Senate and won the largest number of seats they have had in the House since pre-Nixon years. This moved the congress to the right with the nation.

Meanwhile in Massachusetts, taxpayers used the voting booth to dramatically cut their taxes by voting 3-2 on Proposition 2½. Proposition 2½ became the big issue and the state and taxpayers made sure their legislators got their message.

Although we were filled with many messages and many speeches from the candidates of the 1980 Presidential Election, the message was clear that America was ready to try a new approach in solving it's problems.

MBTA Bankruptcy

Commuters Suffer:
MBTA Bankruptcy

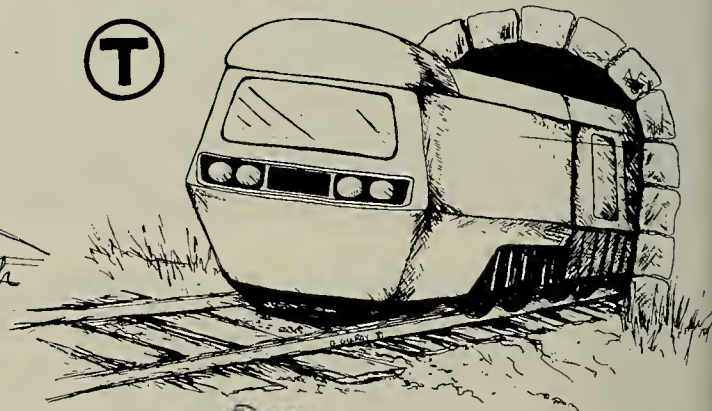

On Tuesday, November 20, 1980 mass transit in Boston declared bankruptcy. If service stopped, thousands of commuters would be stuck without a ride to and from work everyday. However, acting MBTA chief, Barry Locke assured the public that transit service would run normally and that Gov. Ed King would take over the system under his emergency powers, if necessary, to keep the "T" going.

And that's exactly what happened. The MBTA was overtaken by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts until it could reset its bearings.

The Budget was over-spent by a considerable margin. One legislator was quoted, "The MBTA is a big joke." He and other legislatures from areas not served by the "T" say that voters in their districts oppose spending more state money on the system unless it is better managed.

How would the MBTA stay in service with a poor management set-up? Not Possible!

John Lennon Killed

On December 8, 1980 in New York City, a man stepped out of darkness and shot and killed John Lennon. The shock of his violent death stunned the world. But, more than this, focused its attention on the life, words, and dreams of one of the most perceptive, imaginative shapers of a culture the world will ever know. Had he been just another musician, we would have still mourned his death, but he was not. John Lennon not only echoed the ideas and sentiments of the revolutionary sixties—he helped to form them, to put them into words. He pleaded for peace and it is now the hope of millions that his dreams will not die with him. One can only thank God he lived long enough to let those dreams be heard and hope that someday, the world will perhaps "give peace a chance."

By now, everyone is intimately familiar with the details of his life, with and without the Beatles. John Lennon grew up on Penny Lane in Liverpool living a fairly subdued life as a young cultural rebel when he fell passionately in love with a new rebel music, Rock 'n Roll.

He embraced it with his whole being and it became the ideal outlet for his driving inspirations and frustrated spirit. He and Paul McCartney formed the Quarry men, began writing songs and accepted any gig they could get. They didn't care about the money. They simply wanted to make music, a quality worth far more than all the money they ended up making.

Eventually, George Harrison and Richard Starkey (Ringo Starr) joined the group and the name the "Beatles" began to surface more and more in the world of British music. John wrote the words and Paul the music, and this frolicking, fun-loving, innovative group of young men with the new sound and new look literally took an entire generation by the hand and led it through the Sixties on a fantastic ride. They were like the four Pied Pipers, with John playing the flute and the youth of the world following merrily at their heels.

The music of the Beatles was described in Time far better than I could hope to, with unique perception and genuine affection:

The worldwide appeal of the Beatles had to do with their perceived innocence, their restless idealism that stayed a step or two ahead of the times and once in a while turned, bowed low, gave the times a razz and dared them to catch up. The slow songs were heart-stoppers, the fast ones adrenaline rushes of wit, low-down love and high, fabulous adventure. The songs altogether in orchestration of a generation's best hopes and fondest dreams.

Without the Beatles and John Lennon, many people would never have made it through the most violent, turbulent decade the world has seen in a long, long time. People sought and found comfort, serenity, a kind of blanket of tranquility in the words and music of the Beatles. And at the time, they desperately needed it.

John was always conscious of what he was doing and why he was doing it. "He was extraordinarily tuned in. He'd pick up on people, and they'd pick up on him." This was evident in the way he realized the power he had, the Beatles music had over the minds and direction of the millions of young people, and in the fact that he never abused it, the way Jagger often did. He tried to inject love and brotherhood into the arms of the world sometimes skinpopping. "Imagine all the people, sharing all the world and sometimes mainlining. But if you go talking about destruction, dontcha know you can count me out." The man's singular courage transcended any physical sense; it was apparent in his dedication to personal beliefs. The vocal declarations and condemnations rising from his heart pulled no punches and accepted no excuses—he said what he felt, and he meant it.

John Lennon was by no means just another musician—he was a unique man blessed with a rare combination of an unusually clear perception of the world and the talent to convey it in a magical way. His songs offer an insight into ourselves, and into himself—they could reform the most pessimistic cynic, comfort the most desperate lover and they gave the most confused generation alive the one thing it needed most—hope! The underlying theme in his words and music seemed to say we are all brothers and we are all basically alike. The dreams, the problems, the feelings we all share. The important thing is love—"Love is all you need." We'll miss him.

Awhile. He Sat Down In

Silence And Started To Roll, So I Filled Up His
Glass, And Packed Down
His Bowl. Then He Said To Us All As He Flew The Sky, "Merry Christmas To
All, And To All A Good High."

Hostage Release

The long awaited return of the hostages from Iran brought tears of joy to the eyes of millions and set the scene for celebration. Yellow ribbons adorned everything from people to buildings, and flags were raised to full mast all across the country. The restoration of pride to a country which had been humbled for two long set church bells ringing across the nation as the 52 hostages were reunited with their families after a long 444 days in captivity.

When the two Algerian planes carrying the hostages cleared Iranian airspace, champagne corks were popped and the release was made official. Even the changeover in the White House could not out do the release in either the newspapers or the minds of the American people. The crisis was over, and the nation sighed with relief.

This mood, however, was too soon broken. Tales of the days of imprisonment and the torment suffered were soon told, and scorn for the Iranian people was renewed. Mock executions, dark basement cells, interrogations, and heavy censorship of mail and news were just a few of the forms of abuse that the hostages were made to endure. Held in small groups, the Americans never knew whether the others were alive or dead. Escape attempts were punished with beatings, and being led through jeering mobs blindfolded was a regular occurrence.

Despite this torment, the hostages remained strong. Although many lost a large amount of weight and all suffered from severe stress, they all seemed to have come through fairly well considering the incredible psychological trauma which they suffered for 14.5 months.

Along with increasing rage over the treatment of the hostages while in captivity, many Americans began to wonder whether the agreement made with the Iranian government should even be honored. Critics of the deal point out that by turning over cash to the Iranians we are actually paying ransom and setting a dangerous precedent for other countries. Supporters, however, feel that the final settlement was not very different from what the U.S. originally offered, and that all we really did was return to Iran what was already theirs.

Whatever the opinion of the deal struck with Iran, I am sure that everyone would agree that the release of the 52 American hostages was the most important thing, and that we are all very thankful for their safe return.

Music Head Dies 1-24-81

On Saturday, January 24, Dr. Artin Arslanian Passed Away. Dr. Arslanian Was The Head Of The Theory Department In The School Of Music At The University. Along With Music Theory, He Gave Each Student His Genuine Concern For Their Well-being. In Addition, He Filled South Campus With The Sounds Of Christmas Carols Yearly And Supported All Activities In The Music School Wholeheartedly. We Express Our Sympathy For Dr. Arslanian. He Will Be Missed For The Love And Patience He Gave Students In Teaching Them About Theory, Gestalt, And Life.

Greek Report, University Week 2-22-31- 81

After The Death Of A Fraternity Pledge In September, John Duff, University President, Called For An Ad Hoc Committee On Fraternities And Sororities - These Are Some Of The Results Published In The February Report:

1) Rushing- First Semester Freshman Are Not Eligible To Be Rushed. There Is To Be No Discrimination Of Any Kind.

2) Pledging- A Schedule Of Events Held During Pledging Must Meet The Approval Of The Dean Of Students. Hazing Is Not Permitted.

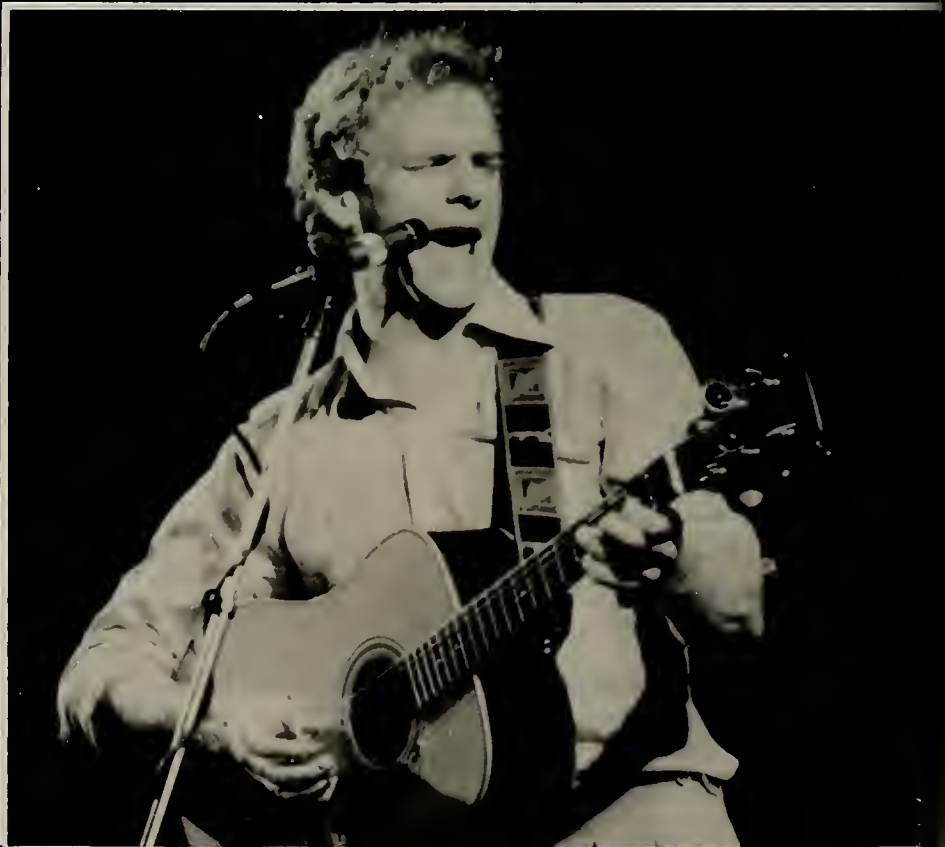

3) Initiation- No Pledge May Be Initiated Who Is In Poor Academic Standing.

4) Social Function- All Social Functions Must Be Registered With The Dean Of Students Office.

5) Academic Standing- The Average Cumulative Average Of Any Fraternity Or Sorority Must Be At Minimum 2.0.

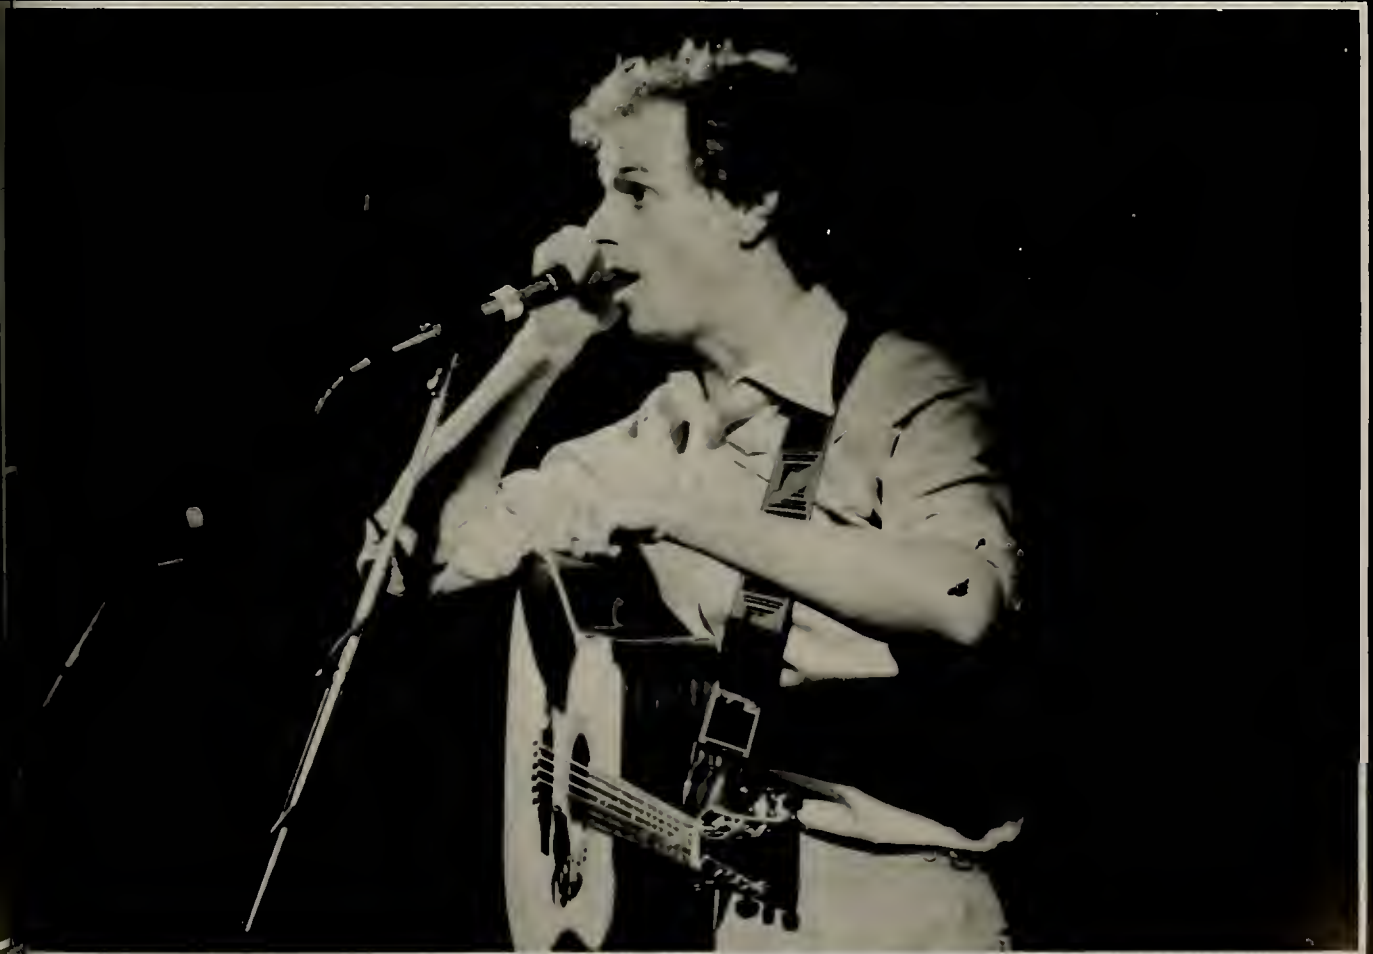

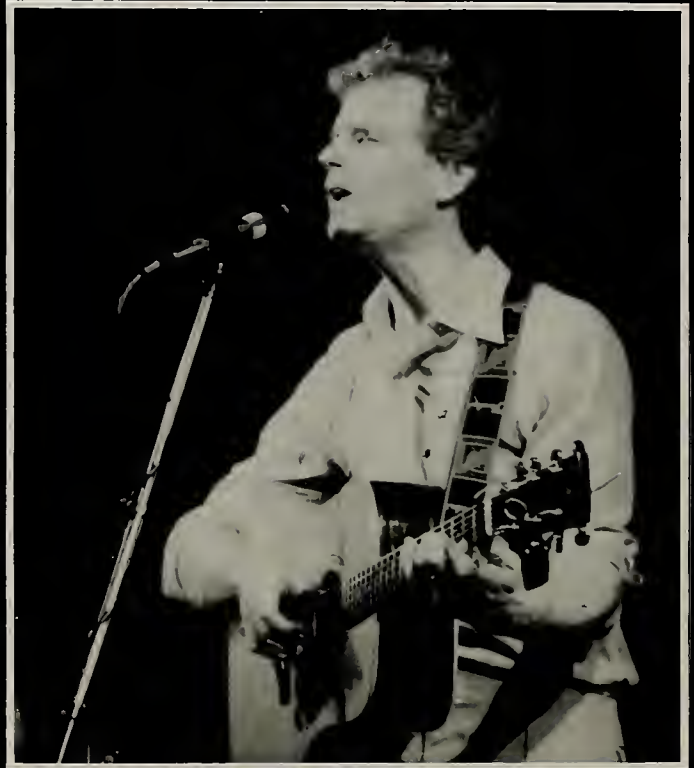

6) Advisor- Every Fraternity And Sorority Must Have An Advisor.

7) Affiliation- The Committee Strongly Recommends That Each Fraternity And Sorority Become Affiliated With A National Organization. "This Affiliation Seems To Benefit Both The Chapter And Its Members In Terms Of The Quality Of Experiences And Associations During The College Years."

A Feature: Buddhism In My Opinion

Every Human Being On The Earth Has Some Questions About Which They Must Think And Answer For Themselves. I, Myself, Have A Question To Ask Of The Readers, "In Which Religion Do You Believe In Order To Find Peace And Happiness?". If You Believe In The Prophet Muhammed, You Would Say Muslimism Is The Best. And Again, If You Believe In Jesus, You Would Say Christianity Is Greatest. So It Is With The Buddhists. There Is No Doubt That We Will Never Find An End To This Discussion. I Believe That Every Religion Is As Good As Any Other, Depending Upon What The Individual Believes. But, You Must Consider Your Religion's Philosophy Yourself, And Not Be Influenced By Customs, Teachers, Or Anything Else. The Buddha Taught Us To Believe In Ourselves With Intellect. This Means That Before You Can Believe In Something, You Must First Meditate. Even Plato And His Student Aristotle Agreed That Buddhism And It's Philosophy Had Taught Human Beings With Great Theories And Roles How To Gain Experience In Knowing What Is What In Their Societies.

The Buddha Completed His Teaching "Tripitaka", Which Consists Of Three Parts. But The Main Things Enlightened By The Buddha Are The Four Noble Truths Of Buddhism. Some Say Other Things Are More Important, But I Believe That Knowing What Is What Means; How Well We Manage Our Life, How Well We Manage Our Job, And How We Deal With Life And And The Search For Happiness.

The World Is Very Confusing. There Is Inflation, Theft, Demonstration And Crime Everywhere And All The Time. The Buddha Said That In Order To Solve These Problems We Must First Destroy The Source Of Them. He Said That All Problems Are The Result Of Some Factor, And That They Can't Be Solved Unless The Source Is Destroyed.

The Buddha Summarized His Doctrine As Follows In The Four Noble Truths:

I. Dukkha (Suffering) In All Its Varied Forms Is An Inherent And Universal Aspect Of Conscious Existence.

II. The Cause Of Suffering Is Desire Or Craving. Desire In This Sense Should Not Be Confused With The Simple Recognition Of A

Pleasurable Or Happy Experience. The Recognition And Acceptance Of Such An Experience Is Not In Itself Unwholesome; Rather The Danger Arises From Craving For Or Attachment To Such An Experience.

III. Nirvana: Death To The World Is A State Of Blissful Existence Due To The Absence Of Desire. It Is A Way To Get Rid Of Passion, Greed, Anger, Misguidance And Corruption.

IV. Path Is A Way To Get Rid Of Dukkha And Greed By Following The Noble Eightfold Path:

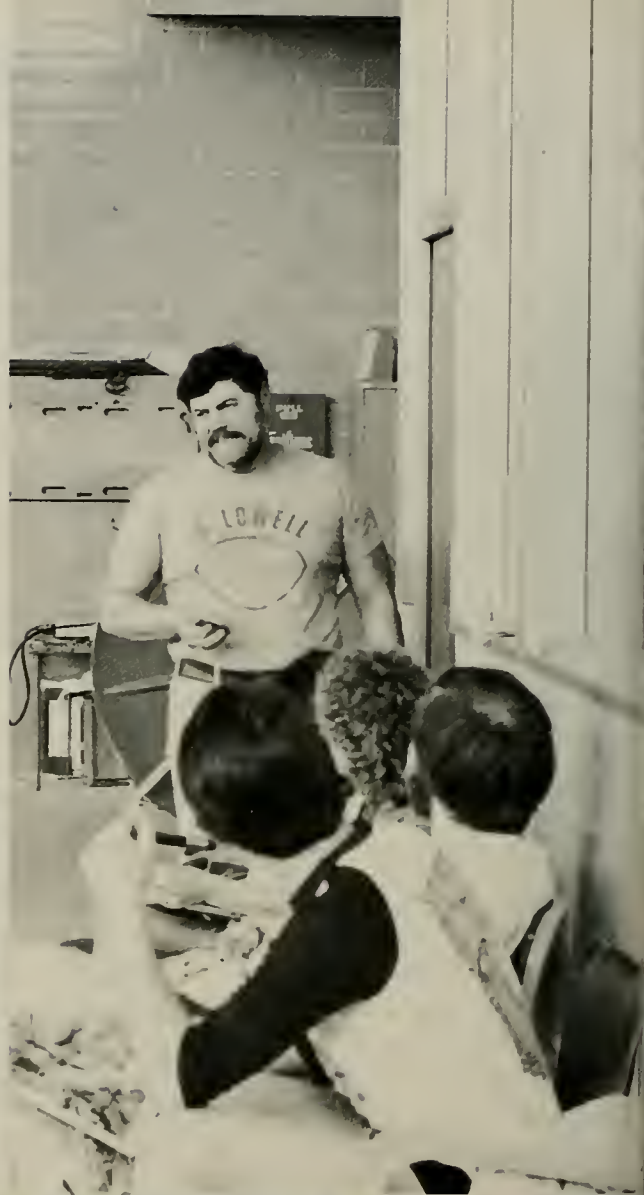

- 1) Right Understanding
- 2) Right Thought
- 3) Right Speech
- 4) Right Action
- 5) Right Livelihood
- 6) Right Effort
- 7) Right Mindfulness
- 8) Right Concentration

These Steps Are Not Taken One At A Time, But Rather Are Worked On Simultaneously In The Maturation Of One's Personality.

For My Conclusion; Buddhism Is The Studying Of Ways, The Understanding Of Right And Wrong, And The Ability To Be Good To One Another. Anyone Who Does Not Understand What Is What Would Get Dukkha As Told In The First Noble Truth, Because He Does Not Understand Buddhism Well Enough. Dharma In Buddhism (The Buddha's Teaching) Will Always Be True Forever.

What Kind Of Things Would You Like To See In The Yearbook?

Abdullah Baysak, M.E. 84. A brief story of each student with their photo. In my country (Turkey) that is how they do it.

Dave Page, Eng. 81. Candid shots of the faculty, the picture of the parking lot filled up, and a shot of the people in the business office so when I deal with the bureaucracies in the "real world", I won't mind so much!

Tom Norris, Acct. 81. Everyday campus life: studying for exams, fighting in line at registration, or students trying to catch a tan between classes.

Velma Munroe, Psy. 83. Pictures of students and their activities: candid type shots. Also comments from students about their experience at college.

Charles Comtois, Acct. 82. A little more of the things that go on behind the scenes; what went on to put things together - like the yearbook, for example.

Sausim Tang, Bus. 81. The yearbook includes just about everything, but I'd like to see more photos of students.

Pat Cahill, M.E. 82. More intramural action shots.

Jean Chery, C.E. 82. I'd like to see more gym shots, like weight lifting, karate, and basketball.

Syed Rahman, C.E. 83. I'd like to see something about U Lowell's background. It's a very old school with a good history. I'd like to see that put in a comprehensive way.

Jim O'Rourke, Art 81. I'd like to see more pictures of the Art department at work with paintings or drawings. I think the Art department has been too underestimated in the past.

Bob McCabe, Acct. 82. Pictures of me doing a lot of things like: studying on south campus, beating some young wench, or raising the flag on good Friday!

Manual A. Domingos, Bus. 83. Photos of all kinds of sports at school, photos of nice part of Lowell to complement the history of the school, and a picture of my face!

Brian Zink, Math. 83. Picture's of student activities like: Halloween party on South, Spring Carnival, and anything that goes on at the Rat.

Karen Henrikson, M.I.S. 83. All the activities here at school: spring carnival, sports events, and the different teams.

Dave Parrella, C.E. 82. A little more coverage of the football team because now they're division III and not just a club.

Liz Rogers, Acct. 84. I'd like to see a lot of pictures of my graduating class, general candid shots of students, dances or proms, and some sport events.

*Hellenic Cultural Association cordially invites you to celebrate
Greek Independence Day
on Saturday
March 28, 1981
in Cumnock Hall
from 5:00 p.m. - 8:00 p.m.*

In 1453, The Great City Of Constantinople, Capital Of The Byzantine Empire, Fell To The Turks. It Signalled The Beginning Of Almost Four Centuries Of Turkish Rule In Greece. One Would Expect That The Culture Of A Conquered People Would Undergo Many Changes (If Not A Diminution) During Such A Long Period Of Time. And Yet, The Greeks Kept Alive Their Culture, Their Magnificent Language And Their Religion.

On March 25, 1891, The Greek Revolution Began And Though The Battle Was A David Versus Goliath Drama, The Result Was Destined To Be The Same As The Biblical Episode. The Greeks Fought

Against Great Odds, But They Had One Monumental Weapon That Their Turkish Oppressors Did Not Possess- The Desire To Be Free. It Was A Desire That Was Invented By Their Ancient Ancestors, And One That They Never Forgot. Those Giants Of Ancient Greece Gave To His Modern Progenitor, And To The Rest Of The World, The Supreme Example Of The Free Mind, The Inquiring Mind, The Mind That Was Not Afraid To Disagree With The Majority; The Mind That Touched All The Notes On The Scale Of Truth Because It Was Not Satisfied With A Half-Truth. The Greek Revolution, Though Weakly Begun, Stirred the Spirits Of America And Europe. And Thus With The Help Of Such Great Philhellenes As Lord Byron And Members Of The United States Congress, The Greek People Regained Their Precious Freedom.

It Is Certainly Fitting To Regard The Greek Revolution As A Constant Reminder That A Free Society Must Never Consider Freedom As A Deed Accomplished. The Greek Revolution, Above All, Tells Us That To Be Free Is To Be Alert, To Be Free Is To Be Alive, To Be Free Is To Be Noble Towards Your Fellow Man.

Why Did You Come To U Lowell?

Offers The Best Program In My Major
 Close To Home
 Inexpensive
 Good Reputation
 Because It's Here
 Good Stuff Cheap
 Because Of The Baseball Team
 Did Not Like Previous College I Attended
 For The Girls

Alpha Sigma Tau

Dan Danecki

The Beta Tau Chapter of the Alpha Sigma Tau Sorority was established at the University of Lowell in 1975 and boasts the distinction of being the only NATIONAL Sorority on campus. The Sorority is a sisterhood of students with similar and varied ideals and interests. Classroom education is supplemental with development of social graces, a sense of responsibility to one's self and others, development of leadership qualities, creating lasting friendships, and membership in a living organization. Good times and much fun are also part of the program. The Sisters encourage good academic standing. They find much strength in a strong Alumnae, ever willing to lend a helping hand. AST's house is located at 101 Riverside St.

GOALS

Despite General Resistance And Pressures To Conform, GOALS Has Succeeded In Providing Support For Gay Students, In An Atmosphere That Is Conducive To Personal Growth And Achievement. GOALS Continues To Educate ULowell That Gays Are Responsible, Healthy Persons, Who Wish To Create A World Where "Differences" Are Respected Rather Than Refuted.

GOALS Members Have Unanimously Agreed NOT To Include A Group Photograph In Sojourn '81. It Is Our Shared Belief That To Do So Might Jeopardize The Safety Of Our Members. This Is A Risk That We Are Not Willing To Take. It Is Our Hope That GOALS Will In Future Years Find The Unthreatened Freedom To Be Able To Show Our Faces In A School Yearbook That Belongs To All Students, Including Ourselves.

KKK KLUB

Barney Anderson

The Kloned Kangaroo Killer Klub is an organization that was originated thousands of years ago in Austrailia's primitive civilization. The Klub was started to protest the Kloning of intelligent forms of kangaroos by extra-terrestrial beings called Klone-drites. Unfortunately, the members of the Klub were jailed because of assumed kraziness, but not until they had killed all of the Kloned Kangaroos. However, I have strong reason to believe that with all the UFO sightings that there have been, lately, that the Klonedrites are making a return to earth with a full load of Kloned Kangaroos ready to take over the earth. They can and must be stopped. But I can't do it alone. If you would like to preserve the human race, and I like to think you would, then contact me, D. Ranged c/o Solomon Mental Hospital.

The Old Worthen Tavern

A Nite At The Worthen

An old building with a funny shape, patches of newness covering the old,
through the door-crowds, the smell of cooking and stale beer,
lean on the old sturdy wood,
dented with age,
order a beer from a mopey old man,
Arthur,
what did he grumble?
the old fan belt starts turning,
crackling speakers,
the benches are carved beneath,
bounce off an old man watching the game,
who will pour if they're all watching?
the bump in the bathroom wall
leans out,
time for another,
play a round, back for another,
out to the cold night air,
a walk through the acre,z.

A Lowell Fairytale

What would life be like without good cheap beer and a place to drink it? Why, history itself would be changed. For centuries crazies have gathered in small, crowded, dark places to swig their favorite brews and mellow out after a long, hard day of acting like human beings. If not for the relaxation of a frosty mug and a fellow drunk to talk to, the human race might not have survived this long!

Fortunately for us all, there are places like this to visit at just about every corner we turn. Our ancestors have filled the streets with sleazy dives, old taverns, and neighborhood bars. Some of these places have real character and some just have cockroaches, but they all serve their purpose with a smile.

Usually the bars that have more spirit than just what's on the shelves, are those that have been haunted for years by people who have sung, shouted, and sipped there. The Old Worthen Tavern is just this type of place. Built in the 1830's for use as a store, the Worthen building was soon transformed by various owners into the weird, triangular, brick and board structure that it was to become.

In 1898, a man named O'Donnell bought the building and gave it a reason to live. He called it the Worthen House, a hotel and tavern, and the people flocked in for a cold one. He built a pressed tin ceiling and a huge wooden bar, and upstairs there were rooms where drunks and travellers could rest for the night.

During this prosperous time of ceiling fans and lunch break customers from the mills, the Worthen regulars claimed that they saw a famous poet in their midst. Maybe they did, for what better place could Poe have found to drink a mug of ale and rest his mind?

But what about prohibition? Would this be the end of the Worthen's happy existence? No, for it was passed from owner to owner and given the name of many businesses before bouncing back to its real purpose. Called Adelard N. Gerard's Restaurant until 1941, someone then remembered its real name and it became the Old Worthen Tavern.

During the years between then and now, the Worthen has been filled with all sorts of life. Patrons include everyone from local residents, to college students, to prominent visitors. Jack Kerouac, a Lowell resident himself, frequented the Worthen and gave it another author to boast about.

The years also aged the building which had been built so long ago. When the Park Service came into town, they started restoring the old tavern. They rebuilt the front and painted the walls, but left the carved benches and all the other evidence of good use throughout the years.

And so now, thanks to the quick thinking of all the past owners and customers, the Old Worthen Tavern remains as a place to drink good cheap beer. Surrounded by laughter, drunken shouts, and music heard through old cheesy speakers, all types of people are able to unwind and drink themselves silly. The owners, regulars, and ever-famous bartenders add to the atmosphere of laid back insanity which has prevailed through the years.

Cheryl Alrutz

Worthen artwork by T.C. Gomez

In order to fully describe the Worthen's mystique, I made a trip through some of Lowell's most popular little bars and asked of a few wobbling regulars-How would you describe the atmosphere at the Old Worthen Tavern? This was their reply:

It's really great. You have to understand the history behind it and the people who go there. The bartender, Arthur, is the best. He's a heck of a guy, but he makes the place worthwhile.

I'd say something poetic, but Poe beat me to it.

I don't understand this, but no matter what time I go in the place Arthur always looks at his wrist, (he has no watch), and then looks at the clock on the wall and says, "You're early." Its a good time.

The food is excellent-Fryeday dinner menu!

The Worthen- it's that place that you go when you're wasted and you know you can get cheap beers and have a hassle with Arthur . . . took me two years to figure out how to get there- I tell ya, it's easier getting there wasted than it is straight.

Raven Haven

Lowlife and students, everytime I go to the Worthen they have to carry me out.

Where the nicest, classiest, richest people go to buy the most expensive beer in Lowell.

I'd heard about that Worthen and when I finally went it was anything but anti-climatic. Everytime it adds more wasted memories to the old collection. The people and the atmosphere are unique- you must experience it.

They could have mopped up Poe's blood earlier!

A historic place where many of my ancestors tied on the same buzz to which I have become accustomed. I think this momentous institution should be funded by ULowell to help all undergraduates to acheive the standards of acedemia to which this school is accustomed.

A quaint little New England bar.

The Worthen- everytime I step foot in the Worthen I get plastered before leaving. JD and Metaxa did me in all too many times. It's a fun but dangerous place to be.

Good people, great food, cheap beer!

The 1980-81 Field Hockey Team opened the season with great optimism. Although it was a very young team with only 3 returning seniors, we were convinced we could build a strong cohesive unit.

One of our major goals of the season was to qualify for the MAIAW State Tournament, and a long awaited chance at the Nationals. With the powerful rivalries of Boston University, Keene State, and Bentley College (who had finished second in the 79-80 AIAW National Tournament), and two strong additions to the schedule, Division I Boston College and Northeastern University, this would not be an easy achievement.

We were successful however, in defeating all of the top rivalries with the exception of Northeastern. Despite the intense competition in Division II, our record of 8-7-1 allowed us to qualify for the MAIAW State Tournament, a first for U. Lowell Field Hockey.

For the opening round of the tournament, we again found ourselves matched against powerful Northeastern University. In the rain-soaked game, we suffered a hard-fought disappointing loss. Just qualifying for such a tournament however, had been the highlight of the season. The spirit and determination of our women enabled us to achieve our goal; thus the 1980-81 field hockey season was a fine success for the University of Lowell.

The ULowell Chiefs, considered the nations top team in the ECAC Division 2, showed their talent by winning the ECAC Crown in a 6-4 decision over Merrimack College. Close Solid checking, fast skating, and precise passing helped bring ULowell the second ECAC title in 3 years, and won the Chiefs their 14th straight game.

The game with Merrimack also improved the teams overall record to 25-4 and qualified ULowell for the National Tournament. Once again the Chiefs came through and ended the season as NCAA champs, proving their place as the #1 team in the country.

Women's Crew

Crew photos by Bill Donovan, Janet Mulligan and Joe LaFreniere

Finally done! What a feeling! Forty-eight pages of the yearbook that I can call my very own! I couldn't have done it all without the help I got. Thanks to Cheryl Alritz for doing most of my typing, and a collective "Thank You" to everyone who took pictures for me: Tim Geist, Mark Cunningham, Mark Durrenburger, John Kaczynski, Joe LaFreniere, Janet Mulligan, and especially Jim Broden, Bob Dassler, and Tom O'Rourke who pulled me through my first deadlines at the very last second. While I'm at it, I'd like to thank my mother and father with a big kiss and hug for making me what I am. Also, thank you to Denise Nadeau for teaching me to stick to my set priorities. I'd like to say Hi to my ex-roomie, Albie, whom I shacked-up with for two whole years, and even when I moved out, we still saved our labs for the last week. Hi and thank you to Janet for everything, and I do love you. I guess I have to say thanks to Barbara Chalmers too, because without her I wouldn't even have my name in the book: Thank you very much for making it all possible. That reminds me of a story I once read. Here it is for those of you who are still with me.

Jesus was walking down the road one day and he saw a crowd gathered ahead of Him. Being curious, He Approached the group to find out the gossip. He arrived to find that this mob was preparing to stone a lovely young maiden to death. It seems that she was an adultress and stoning was the usual punishment. Before anyone could whip a rock at the woman, Jesus entered the circle, and while the shielding the young lady said, "Let he who is without sin, cast the first stone." Well, everyone was to ashamed that they slowly redfaced and downcast, turned away dropping their rocks as they left. All, that is, except this one woman who picked up the biggest rock that she could find, and walked right up to the adultress, preparing to crush her head with it. Jesus planted Himself directly in front of her to stop her and said "Ya know Ma, sometimes you really piss me off."

Remember, survival is the ability to swim in strange waters, never do today what you can put off until tomorrow if tomorrow might improve the odds, and the tail goes with the hide, you can't be a little bit pregnant, and it is no kindness to hang a man slowly.

*With love,
BILL*

Mark Bettencourt

Eyes meet eyes . . .

Soon,

Thighs meet thighs.

There are secret ties

And

You are secret lovers

But

There are always others.

So,

Lies meet lies

And

Love dies—

Again,

Leaving you

With no good byes.

James Crawford

There is no jumping
From the cog wheel now
The colossal busting
Apart by the frow
Is rendering dark fissures
In the palace of pictures
Behold—and despair
Cast care to the air
Though the chariot flieth
Away from the dearth
No cutting from faith
Will narrow Fate's girth.
Only wish for the many
A happy one fate—
Not from the sun to go astray
(It would leave the world undone)

No, this old rotisserie of creation
Is a goodly godly machine I say
Here wet and green with dew
Only gray where rains do spray
But ah—
But there are hard cornices
Where things may hide
Unbeknownst to novices
There on the car does ride
The wind scoops all form
From under structured day
Seeled, we're tethered
Heaven feathered
Through one enormous storm
We must find our way.

But see, dreaming iron, forging mankind sleeps to find points of departure to leap outward to save one's self is such a thing may be ascertained from the scheme To save one's self as i said from having to fly around and around in the same little moviehouse Flitting at the bulb and such making shadow shows of silence Sprocketed night on slowly clicks where behind the scene great seeming structures idly set perhaps in the yaw space-gossamer grid-like time shapes Eternity cakes (a lightly frosted trap) catching flier acts, acrobats Jugglers smugglers of sweets eating their way through doughy mountains All in this huge movie-Lying at night i hear the projector hum which almost sounds like a river the way the water grunting throws itself pellmell over and over like kids on a hill Sporting on the green The imperturbable mass dreams things like this being so young and precocious So young and sprightly it embraces us in the hard night air as We stand like furless software to mimic ancestral plans The unfinished dreams of grandfather kernelled in sleep scores—of waking sounds— of cooling by crack dawn dusk when like tired heroes of nothing special we heavily tread with accomplishment airs The riddle is piddle for pismire on this level of universe—I'm blasted by day Full blown as night falls slam at the theatre door and the movie dies as millions of eyes lie scattered about in enormity. The starry night leaves a raven at the door One eye on Pallas the other on tesselled time dreaming dreams of motion evermore . . .

Obscure thoughts rustle within my mind of oddle. An unleaven brain swimming in a pool of idiosyncracies and consequences, ones on which I dare not dwell for long. She had waited and I had waited yet it was inevitable that we would meet again and before our paths crossed. I could not help but embellish the thought of our meeting, to see some hopeful oddment that we overlooked which would somehow fight its way through the rubble of our past.

It frightened me yet I was exhilarated.

It was nice seeing her smile again. I had almost forgotten what that was like. I smiled too not because I wanted to but because I had to and not because I had to but because there was no other way to express myself. I was happy and she was a dancer. A dancer dancing to a different tune. Not mine, but a freer, more melodic tune. Uncaged and innocently eager she had taken on new beauty now—she was my friend.

And I didn't fear it any longer nor did I despair. I revelled in it. The past was far from a jumbled mass of sorrow at which I cringed. Memories were no longer a cross to bear. As I looked at her she sang and my eyes were a camera that clicked at every resemblance of the past. The familiar room was even smiling at me and the walls offered me a cinematographic review of our year together that was honest and heartwarming. I was beige (almost orange) and she was beige (almost orange) and we were no longer closing in on each other. There was room between us, room to breathe, room to respect, room to admire, and most of all room to wonder.

And so I left that room and her, unlike I entered, invigorated, certain, and spiritually moved. I had been witness to a most wonderful metamorphosis. Winter was drawing near, but it seemed the springtime. She was the new-born butterfly flirting with the breeze. I was the interpreter. I had purpose. Without me she would be the sunset with no one to take in its beauty. She would be the fine book with no reader. She did not intend to cast her image yet I had a mind now that couldn't receive it. We need no invocations; we blessed ourselves in an embrace and parted, not forever, and not for any determined length of time, but until we met again.

PLANTS

Have you ever noticed all the plants around campus. You find them in the offices of your major, the office of your advisor, the offices of the deans, and even in the dorms or homes that we live in. They bring life to a room. It reminds me that we must always remember nature. Harmful chemicals and radioactive wastes may destroy all living things. We as students must always keep in mind that we must work with nature rather than against it. Hopefully we will someday learn enough to make this possible.
